Liandra Wheeler, MA, LPA, HSP-PA is a Licensed Psychological Associate - HSP in the state of North Carolina. She obtained her Masters in Clinical Psychology from North Carolina Central University (NCCU) and received her Bachelors in Psychology from The University of North Carolina at Greensboro, with a minor in African American studies and Classical studies. While attending graduate school she was inducted into Psi Chi international honor society in psychology. Prior to completing her masters she founded her non profit, Mental Illness Anonymous (M.I.A) with a goal of promoting a positive shift in physical, emotional, and mental health among individuals with mental illness, weakening the stigma against mental illness in the community, creating a sense of hope and support that will give people the courage to accept help with their illness, and potentially break the cycle. She has worked in the mental health field since 2014 and has experience working with children, adolescents, and adults with diverse backgrounds and a range of concerns. Her education and professional background gives her a unique and effective approach to counseling.

Jonathan N. Livingston, PhD is a Professor with the Department of Psychology, North Carolina Central University. Dr. Livingston received his doctorate in Community Psychology and, prior to attending Michigan State, he received a Master's in African and African American psychology at Florida A&M University. His areas of interest are African American psychological well-being and the cumulative effects of racism and social inequalities on African American mental health and health disparities. Additional areas of interest include program evaluation, community development, and education reform.

Dr. Livingston's current research focuses on social and psychological factors associated with positive health and mental health outcomes for African Americans. Also, he has served as director of Outreach for the Export Grant, a project of the Julius Chambers Biomedical Bio-technical Research Institute, evaluating the effectiveness of their efforts to reduce health disparities and educate the African American Community about alcohol and substance abuse; cancer and cardiovascular disease risk factors. He has also served as Co-Director of the North Carolina Central University Institute for Children Youth and Family at NCCU and served a Senior Research Fellow at Johnson C. Smith University, Smith Institute for Applied Research. He is also currently Co-principal Investigator on the Duke NCCU partnership investigating the use of ethno drama to address health disparities among low income communities of color.

Dr. Livingston has taught classes in community, personality, and adolescent psychology, research methodology, statistics, and human growth and development. In 2001, he received the Excellence in Teaching Award from Michigan State University and in 2009 he received the Excellence in Teaching Award at NCCU. In 2019 he received the NCCU Board of Governors Award for Excellence in Teaching in North Carolina. He was also finalist for the Best HBCU Male faculty in U.S 2019. Also, while at NCCU he has assisted in securing over 20.3 million in grant money from federal and state agencies. He has authored and co-authored peer reviewed journal articles, book chapters, and newspaper articles on race, psychology, mental health, health disparities, and education as well as presented his research at several national and international conferences.
